

David Syposs
Vice President of Product Marketing, Business Development, and Strategic Account Management
HealthTrio

David Syposs is Vice President of Product Marketing, Business Development and Strategic Account Management, providing leadership for marketing, public relations, business development and account management activities. He is responsible for managing HealthTrio's relationships with its solution and consulting partners, trade associations and customers.

Over the past 20 years, Syposs has served in executive level positions with HMOs and technology companies, including Chief Information Officer for Independent Health in Buffalo, New York. He has written several studies on health management technology and electronic imaging that were published nationally and he has appeared as a speaker for national healthcare and technology conventions on topics related to using the Internet for clinical and administrative connectivity within various healthcare communities.